

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, CHICO

Louis Stokes Alliance for Minority Participation

LSAMP is a CSU program promoting an increase in the number of bachelor degrees in science, mathematics, engineering, and technology awarded to minority students and encouraging more of these students toward graduate school. Our emphasis is to strengthen problem-solving skills and support academic excellence. We are funded by the National Science Foundation, the California State University system, and CSU, Chico, to facilitate pathways to success.

We target underrepresented minority students who are excited by the prospect of contributing to the fields of science, engineering, or mathematics. Our target ethnic groups are Latino, African American, all Native Americans, and Pacific Islander. LSAMP students get acquainted with faculty and students with similar interests.

Applicants to the Summer Calculus Boot Camp must have declared majors in Science, Engineering, or Mathematics and will attend our academic year workshops. Minimum requirements include successful completion of trigonometry and eligibility for precalculus or calculus in the fall semester at either CSU Chico or Butte College. ELM requirements must be met before July.

Summer All successful participants receive a stipend of $600, a graphing calculator, and other supplies after completing the LSAMP Summer Calculus Boot Camp. This four-week boot camp (in July, 8AM to 3PM, Monday through Friday) will focus on explorations in thinking and applying calculus and precalculus mathematics incorporating calculator skills. Housing is provided for a limited number of eligible students.

Fall and Spring Enrollment is required in weekly collaborative courses which parallel core courses like precalculus, calculus, chemistry, or physics. Students who attend these workshops and display excellence in the parallel courses will be rewarded with bookstore gift certificates, from $100 to $400 each.

LSAMP Summer Boot Camp Applications are available in January.
