INTRODUCTION

1916

This is the sixth edition of R. L. Polk & Co.'s Chico-Oroville Directory. The experience of the past five editions has been used to good advantage in the publication of this issue. The directory is beginning to put on a metropolitan appearance. As the swaddling clothes of infancy are changed in the youth, so are the dress and type and appearance of the Chico-Oroville Directory changed to suit the growing conditions of Chico-Oroville. Instead of printing 30 names on a page as heretofore, 52 names are printed on each page of this new volume. New type and a clear face make it infinitely easier to find information, for now each time the directory is opened 104 names are brought to view, where before only 60 were found. We believe this improvement will be much appreciated.

The directory has been greatly improved in many other respects, much new and valuable information has been added to it and there are no directories on the American continent more complete nor with a greater variety of information which is especially applicable to these two communities.

The first part of the work is an alphabetical list of names, firms, business organizations, institutions and societies and of all persons and places in Chico, beginning with page 7 and extending to page 115. Here may be found all the people, what they do, where they work and where they live. It is a chronological record of the people and their institutions and is the most generally used work of reference of this day, and after a while becomes a permanent history of the people and their institutions.

Then there is a list of the rural routes emanating from Chico. This information begins on page 116 and extends to page 130. Here are the land owners and renters, and here is afforded the opportunity of communication between urban and rural life.

This feature of the directory enables the people of the city to exchange their commodities with those of the country; it gives those in the country an equal opportunity to communicate with those in the city.

The next part of the work is the numerical street guide or directory householders of Chico, beginning with page 131 and running to page 157. Here all the streets are arranged in alphabetical order. The houses are all listed along each street in numerical order and opposite each house number appears the names of the persons, or rather the head of each establishment. This is a very necessary and useful class of information, used by all the people for an infinite variety of purposes.
