

Burling's questionable assumptions:

1. All aspects of language are interdependent.
2. Languages do not mix.
3. Grammar and phonology, being more central, are more central to instruction.
4. Adults cannot learn unconsciously but need explicit instruction.
5. The four skills should be taught together.
6. Spoken has priority over written.
7. Production should be as advanced as reception.