DESCRIPTION OF COURSE:
This is a broad-based introductory lecture course that surveys child development from a multidisciplinary scientific perspective. Both theoretical and practical aspects of development are presented and examined within a multicultural context. The 250 course is appropriate for students who are (or may later become) declared Child Development majors or minors or are in the Liberal Studies child concentration. It is not appropriate for Speech Pathology, Nursing majors, or those students seeking to fulfill three units of General Education. These students should be enrolled in CD 252.

This course is not focused on what it feels like to be a parent or how to properly raise children, although there is considerable discussion of concepts relevant to these topics. Instead, the course is concerned primarily with historical and contemporary scientific theory and research on human development from conception through adolescence. Emphasis is given to biological, psychological (intrapsychic), and socio-cultural influences on the growth and development of boys and girls. The evolutionary perspective of human development is core to this class.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:
Upon completion of C.D. 250 or 252, students will be able to:

1. Describe general physical development from conception through adolescence.
2. Describe the development of gross and fine motor skills.
3. Discuss the role of genetic and hereditary factors (including maturation) in the cognitive, behavioral and psychosocial development of children.
4. Discuss the perceptual and cognitive development of children, citing relevant theory and research.
5. Describe and discuss socio-cultural influences on development from the macro (cultural) to the micro (intra-familial) systems.
6. Understand the developmental process.
7. Understand the role of adults who work with children or otherwise teach them, especially parents and teachers.
8. Be aware of best practices when working with children and families.
9. Write an APA style manuscript.

Student Learning Objectives (SLOs):
This course directly contributes to SLO I, Foundations of Child Development and SLO V, Critical Thinking Skills. The chapters and presentations on history and theories provide a foundation for understanding contemporary research and theory on child development. The remaining chapters give an overview of the current research on child development. Finally, students will receive an introduction to research methods and data analysis fundamental to critical thinking.

GRADING:
Grades are objectively based on the total points you earn on the required papers, exams and in-class activities as outlined below. THERE IS NO EXTRA CREDIT OPTION beyond these activities.

EXAMS: 500 points
There will be six exams composed of objective questions drawn from the text, lectures and in-class activities. Each exam will be worth a minimum of 100 points. Usually there will be two or three bonus questions, which might make a test worth as much as 106 points. The lowest test score will be dropped automatically for a net total for exams of 500 points.

MAKE UP POLICY if you miss an exam there is a make up during the regularly scheduled final. Make-ups require a valid excuse.

IN-CLASS ACTIVITIES: 100 points
Periodic quizzes, writing assignments, and/or participation in class activities will contribute 100 points.

PAPER: 100 points
Each student will be expected to prepare a 5-6 page Child Development manuscript. The manuscript will be graded in terms of its conformance to APA Style, its organization and content, and its literacy. Included in these pages are a separate title page and a separate reference page.

Students with disabilities (taken from Disability Support Services website):
If you have a documented disability that may require reasonable accommodation, please contact Disability Support Services (DSS) for coordination of your academic accommodations. They can be reached at 898-5959. More information about their services can be found at http://www.csuchico.edu/dss/index.shtml

Academic honesty (taken from Student Judicial Affairs website):
- All written work is to be individually produced unless otherwise noted in the assignment.
- Plagiarism is the use of the written work of others (either direct copies or close paraphrases) as one's own original work. If quotations and/or passages from other works are used in papers, they must be accorded the proper citation in order to avoid any misunderstandings about plagiarism.
- When there is evidence suggesting that a student has committed plagiarism, copied the work of others, allowed others to copy their work, cheated on an exam, altered class material or scores, or has inappropriate possession of exams, or sensitive material, the incident will be investigated by Student Judicial Affairs. The consequences for academic dishonesty are severe.

In this class, failure to cite sources properly will be considered plagiarism.
