

UPPER-DIVISION WRITING COURSE DESIGNATION

Department:

Major(s):

Date Submitted:

According to the rules of the Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) program from EM 17-009, which took effect in Fall 2018, all students must complete TWO upper-division courses with an emphasis on writing (called W-courses). One course must be a GWAR course (previously called a WP course), which is part of the student's major.

The other course must be "an upper-division W-course in or specified by the department of the student's major". In the space below, please list all courses your department has chosen to specify for meeting this requirement for students in the major(s) above. Courses which could be selected include:

- Current upper-division Writing (W) Course
- Current upper-division General Education Writing courses (see GE planning sheet)
- Current GW courses (students could fulfill the UD writing requirement with two GWAR (GW) courses)
- Courses in your department which currently do not have any of the above status but for which you want to obtain W-course status. For these courses, an additional "W-course application form" must also be completed.

If you want to include non-GE courses from other departments in your list, please consult with those departments before submitting this form.

Majors with more than one option may specify different sets of upper-division W-courses for each; please submit separate forms for each option.

Alternatively, if your department wishes to allow students to count any upper-division W-course for this requirement, mark the box below.

Students in the major(s) above can meet this requirement with any upper-division W-course
